POLICY STATEMENT

A mentally healthy community at our service

Support for staff's professional practice

- (5) Educators are trained in, and participate in professional development activities related to, children's mental health and wellbeing, including how to support children and family members who have mental illness or neurodevelopmental disorders
- (6) Professional development opportunities for staff may include:
  - Attending seminars, workshops or conferences about children's mental health and wellbeing
  - Participating in relevant training or programs
  - Reading and reflecting on newsletters, magazines and other relevant material
  - Mentorships with other staff members
  - Opportunities to discuss mental health and wellbeing in staff meetings
- (7) We maintain connections with external professional and support services to provide advice, referrals and collaborate on tailored support plans for children and families
- (8) Staff are encouraged to care for themselves and to be mindful that their own mental health and wellbeing can affect their ability to care for and educate children
- (9) Staff who feel stressed or overwhelmed at work should speak to their supervisor/room leader and/or the nominated supervisor to get additional support

Social connections and belonging

- (10) Staff are aware that social connection and a sense of belonging play a critical role in shaping children's emotional wellbeing, resilience and overall development
- (11) Staff follow relevant service policies and practices to guide their interactions with children and actions to support children's positive relationships with each other
- (12) Staff model positive relationships and effective communication. They treat each other, families, visitors and children with care and respect
- (13) We encourage social connections in our educational program and in our day-to-day routines

An inclusive and diverse environment

- (14) Educators understand that when children have a sense of self and belonging, they have greater self-esteem, resilience, meaning and purpose
- (15) Educators learn about each child's unique characteristics and circumstances formally at enrolment, and informally throughout the year by asking questions, and interacting with and observing the child
- (16) Educators learn about cultural safety for children from Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander backgrounds. We acknowledge and teach their histories, cultures, languages, traditions, religions and spiritual beliefs
- (17) The diverse backgrounds, languages and identities of children and their family, staff and communities are reflected in our environment and activities

Family partnerships

- (18) We provide families with general information regarding mental health and wellbeing from reliable sources through our usual channels (e.g., on social media, in our newsletter, in the brochures and posters we display)
- (19) Parents and educators regularly share information with each other (formally and informally) about the child's development, including their strengths and abilities, and their psychological, social and emotional development and needs
- (20) We can also provide specific advice and referrals for children and families who need support from our network of external support agencies, child health/development specialists, and mental health groups and professional associations
- (21) If a child is being assessed or supported by a health professional or service (and their parent asks us to), we will collaborate on and implement any management or support plans that are needed

Social and emotional learning for mental health

- (22) Educators help children feel secure, meet their needs, and teach them the skills they need to regulate their emotions and behaviour
- (23) Educators are attuned to children's feelings and learn how each child expresses what they need or want in their own unique way. They acknowledge children's emotions, and respond with genuine warmth, empathy and understanding
- (24) Children are offered consistent support during challenging situations. Educators use positive communication, reinforcement and reassurance
- (25) Educators must follow our Positive Relationships with Children Policy and Procedures, which cover our principles and practices for social and emotional learning for children in our care

A holistic approach to mental health and wellbeing

Promoting healthy eating and drinking to stay hydrated

- (26) Staff are aware of the connection between nutrition and mental health and wellbeing
- (27) Staff follow our Nutrition and Dietary Requirements Policy, which sets out how we promote healthy eating and ensure children are offered food and drinks that are appropriate to their needs

Encouraging physical activity

- (28) Staff are aware that physical activity is a major contributor to mental health and wellbeing
- (29) Staff follow our Physical Activity Policy, which sets out how children are given regular opportunities throughout the day to participate in both structured and unstructured physical activities

Being in nature

- (30) We promote being in nature due to its ability to reduce stress, improve mood, enhance focus and calm, provide connection and meaning, enhance cognitive function, increase vitamin D production, and improve physical fitness and health
- (31) Children have time to freely investigate the natural environment during regular unstructured outdoor time
- (32) Our program includes nature-based activities to connect children to the natural environment (e.g., gardening/growing plants, collecting leaves and flowers, observing birds and insects, nature walks, scavenger hunts, nature-based excursions and incursions). We also use natural materials in play and learning, such as stones, leaves, sticks and shells

- (33) We use the natural environment for relaxation and sensory exploration (e.g., sitting under trees, listening to birds, touching different textures, watching leaves being blown about)

Sleep and rest

- (34) Educators understand children need enough quality rest and sleep so they can manage their emotions, and reduce irritability, frustration and dysregulation
- (35) Educators follow our Sleep and Rest Policy to ensure that children's individual sleep and rest needs are met, and they can engage in learning and play

Early support for children's mental health and wellbeing

- (36) We maintain open and supportive communication with families about their needs and their child's needs, or the potential impact of a family situation (e.g., physical or mental illness, family separation, violence or financial disadvantage)
- (37) Educators observe and document the development and wellbeing of children. They are trained to identify if a child is showing possible early signs of mental health difficulties or developmental disorders (e.g., changes in behaviour, developmental differences, or concerning emotional or behavioural difficulties)
- (38) Educators refer any concerns they have to their room leader and/or nominated supervisor, who will help determine whether a child or family may need information or extra support (either from within the service or from external support services). Educators communicate any concerns they have about a child to their parents in a respectful, empathetic and caring way
- (39) Staff keep information about children's mental health and wellbeing, behaviour or family situation confidential. They only discuss it with the people who need to know – that is, those who are directly involved in the child's care
- (40) If a child has been diagnosed with a mental illness or neurodevelopmental disorder, educators respond to their individual needs and develop, implement and maintain management plans and support strategies where required

Supporting children after traumatic events, including natural disasters or community trauma

- (41) Staff are resourced and trained to support children who have experienced trauma, including natural disasters or collective trauma
- (42) When a child experiences a traumatic event (e.g., the death of a loved one, illness or accidents, violence, natural disaster, war, crime etc), educators respond sensitively to the individual preferences and needs of the child
- (43) Educators support children by following our procedure for helping children through difficult times (in our Positive Relationships for Children Policy)
